PROMPTS FOR AI DANCE MUSIC

@mista.lewys @normalgoodz / Lewys C. G. Evans

Hello and welcome!

Thanks for opening this ebook and your mind to the future of music creation using text. With this book and a creative spirit, let your imaginations come alive with artistic and specific prompting strategies. This book is your backstage pass to the party of tomorrow, where words can sketch new songs, inspire new horizons of musical genres and render timeless works of sonic wizardry...

Think of this as your invite to team up with AI and make more music than you've ever imagined. We're talking beats that pulse with life, rhythms that make your soul wanna dance, and melodies that stick with you like the best kind of earworm.

We've put together this book because we know music isn't just about the notes; it's about the vibe, the feeling, and the journey. It's for you—the producers, the bedroom DJs, the shower singers turned songwriters, and everyone who's ever felt a beat and thought, "Yeah, I wanna make that."

Inside, you'll find a goldmine of prompts, like secret ingredients, that'll help you and AI whip up tracks that could only come from the wildest parts of your imagination. We're all about breaking rules, pushing boundaries, and creating sounds that'll make the future dance to our tune. It's about exploring, experimenting, and creating tunes that feel like they're from 3024.

Tempo Tags

Here is an organized list with BPM ranges, which are broadly accepted in classical and contemporary music. Keep in mind that these are general guidelines, and actual performance tempos can vary.

Lento to Largo (Very Slow)

- Grave: 20-40 BPM
- Largo: 40-60 BPM
- Larghetto: 60-66 BPM

Adagio (Slow)

- Lento: 45-60 BPM
- Adagissimo: Very slow
- Adagio: 66-76 BPM

Andante (Walking Pace)

- Largamente: Broadly
- Andante: 76-108 BPM

- Andantino: Slightly faster than Andante (but sometimes interpreted as slightly slower than Andante)

Moderato (Moderate)

- Andante moderato: Between Andante and Moderato
- Moderato: 108-120 BPM
- Allegretto: 112-120 BPM
- Tempo comodo: At a comfortable pace

Allegro (Fast)

- Allegro moderato: 116-120 BPM
- Allegro: 120-168 BPM
- Allegro vivace: 132-140 BPM
- Vivace: 140-176 BPM
- Allegro assai: Very fast
- Molto allegro: Very fast
- Vivacissimo: Very lively and fast

Presto to Prestissimo (Very Fast)

- Allegrissimo or Allegro vivace: 172-176 BPM
- Presto: 168-200 BPM
- Prestissimo: 200+ BPM

Additional Terms Reflecting Change or Character

- Accelerando: Gradually accelerating or speeding up
- Ritardando: Gradually slowing down
- Rallentando: Broadening, often implying a decrease in tempo
- Rubato: Flexible tempo for expressive purposes

- Mosso: Movement, more lively
- Con moto: With motion
- Tempo primo: Return to the first tempo
- Doppio movimento: Double the speed
- Sostenuto: Sustained, can imply a slower tempo
- Allargando: Broadening, usually slowing down
- Stringendo: Pressing on faster
- Tranquillo: Tranquilly, can imply a slower tempo
- Con brio: With vigor, implies a lively tempo
- Cantabile: In a singing style, the tempo can vary
- Scherzando: Playful or joking
- Tempo di marcia: March tempo, variable
- Tempo giusto: Strict, exact tempo
- Animato: Animated or lively

These BPMs are not absolutes but rather guidelines to help musicians interpret the tempo markings composers use in their scores. The context of the piece, the composer's era, and stylistic preferences can all influence the chosen tempo.
